About The Here & Now

The Here and Now is Texas' newest and most exciting contemporary Irish music group. They are a four piece ensemble based primarily out of Austin, TX. The band's members include Niamh Fahy on fiddle and vocals, Chris Buckley on fiddle, Rob Forkner on bodhran, and Joseph Carmichael on guitar and vocals.

Individually they are all highly experienced, accomplished and award winning musicians. Each member is well versed in a range of styles, but they have a shared passion for Traditional Irish music. The Here and Now's passion for Irish music and playing together is evident in the tightness and energy of their sound, which comes through in droves during their live performances.

Coming off of highly successful tours over the last two summers headlining summer concert and artists series, playing to packed house concert audiences, and along with the highly anticipated release of their second album, The Here and Now have quickly become a force in the genres of World and Traditional Irish music. As one reviewer stated, "There are great things to come from this talented group of musicians."
